TRADE WITH MEXICO.

The recent announcement of a proposed new form of currency for Mexico lends especial interest to some figures just compiled by the Department of Commerce and Labor through its Bureau of Statistics regarding the commerce between the United States and Mexico. These figures show that the exports from the United States to Mexico have grown from 23,000,000 dollars in 1890 to 46,000,000 dollars in 1904, speaking in round terms; and that the imports into the United States from Mexico have grown from 23,000,000 dollars in 1890 to 44,000,000 in 1904. Thus our exports to Mexico in 1904 were three and one-half times as great as in 1890, and our imports from Mexico practically twice as great as in that year.

An even more interesting fact is found in a comparison of the figures of Mexican trade with the United States with the total trade of Mexico. These show that of the imports into Mexico in the latest year for which information is available the United States supplied 59 per cent of the total imports, and that of the exports from Mexico 76 per cent were sent to the United States. Mexico takes from the United States a larger share of her total imports than any other country in the world except Canada, which takes 60 per cent of her imports from the United States; and Mexico sends to the United States also a larger share of her exports than any other country in the world except Cuba, of whose exports during the fiscal year 1904, 80.6 per cent went to the United States, as against 76 per cent of the total exports of Mexico sent to this country. While figures showing the percentage of Mexican imports supplied by the United States and the percentage of Mexico's exports sent to the United States are not available for earlier years, it is well known that the United States has rapidly increased the share which she supplies of the imports into Mexico and the share which she takes of the exports from Mexico. This increase has been especially marked since the construction of railroads entering Mexico from the United States. Prior to the construction of railroads between the United States and Mexico the share of Mexico's imports supplied by the United States ranged from 20 to 30 per cent, against the 59 per cent of the present time, as above noted; while the share of Mexico's exports sent to the United States was about in the same proportion. The effect of direct rail communication between the United States and Mexico is also illustrated by the fact that the Central American states, which can only be reached by water, as was the case with Mexico prior to the construction of railways connecting the two countries, now take 43 per cent of their imports from the United States, as against the 59 per cent which Mexico takes of her imports from us.

DIVERSIFIED INDUSTRIES.

The public meeting of the Farmers' Institute, at the Government Nursery this evening, should be numerously attended. "Diversified Industries" is something which many talk about as desirable for Hawaii, but when it comes to doing anything to help establish some industry other than sugar, most everybody is willing to let the other fellow do it. The number of people who take an active interest in diversified agriculture in Hawaii is comparatively small, but these few are in earnest, and will not be deterred from their work by lack of attendance of the general public at meetings held for the purpose of promoting new and helping older enterprises. At the same time a manifestation of appreciation is always a help, and all who can do so should attend the meeting this evening, not only to encourage the good work, but to gain knowledge for themselves.

Evidently wonders that survive nine days are scarce on Maui. The Republicans of that district are going to have their delighted surprise at coming out of the big end of the election horn warmed over for Christmas. It is clear that the dominant party on Maui depended upon downright hard work for pulling through.

Hilo is going to have an arbor day feature in the dedication of Moheau park. Planting trees by roadsides is engaging the attention of the Wailuku Improvement Association. Sugar is not in all the thoughts of the people of Hawaii.

With its ample power for doing things which the people have given to it, the Republican party has one problem to solve great enough to test the wisdom and potency of its aggregate statesmanship. This is nothing less than the salvation of the American mercantile marine, if, as reported, the Merchant Marine Commission is going to show Congress that, although the shipping interests are stronger on the Pacific than on the Atlantic coast, America's magnificent new steam commerce in the Pacific is liable to be forced out of existence by subsidized foreign competition.

Our old cylinder press is now for sale, and will come in quite handy as a cane crusher in some of the big Maui mills. —Maui News.

No doubt the machine would serve any old ex-press purpose.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Mrs. Andrew Fuller will be on the Walkiki lanai of the Hawaiian Hotel this morning (Monday) from ten o'clock to twelve to receive money for tickets sold, or the return of tickets given out to be sold, for "The House that Jack Built." Will the ladies kindly note this and be there to report, as after tomorrow evening's performance the exchange tickets are of no use. There are some seats for sale yet for Tuesday evening's performance and one lone left.

The sale for matinee tickets opens this morning at Wall, Nichols Co. at nine o'clock. Children fourteen years of age and under will be admitted to any of the $1.50 seats for a dollar. The gallery will be opened up for twenty-five cents. This gives the different school children a chance to see the operetta. Plenty of seats in the balcony for seventy-five cents and a dollar. The matinee will commence at three o'clock, giving ample time for children to get there after the school hour.

The last performance tomorrow evening will commence at eight o'clock. The first evening was a little past eight perhaps, but Miss Martin promises there will be no delay Tuesday evening, realizing that the children have to go to school the next morning and in spite of great efforts, the first night is a bit exciting and a few moments' delay almost unavoidable.

SEARCH FOR "LEVANT" ISLAND

The Army and Navy Journal has the following: With reference to the statement in our issue of Nov. 12, concerning the "Cruise of the Tacoma" in search of a doubtful island in the North Pacific Ocean, Mr. James D. Hague, who accompanied the vessel, writes us saying: "The Tacoma's actual searching time was just four days (see Commander Nicholson's report, printed in your issue of June 11), instead of four weeks, as erroneously stated in your recently published notice. The results of the Tacoma's search were conclusive only as far as it concerns the ocean area actually seen from the track line of the ship. The total area thus examined is not more, perhaps less, than one-third of the questionable region from which reports of such an island have come, from time to time, during many years past; leaving an area of 20,000 to 30,000 square miles still unexplored. The Tacoma gave up the search, not because it was hopeless, but because longer stay became impracticable by reason of insufficient coal supply."

When Nat Goodwin played Shylock in the "Merchant of Venice" some time ago, Wilton Lackaye was among those who considered the characterization a failure; and he was so frank in his expression of opinion, and insisted so strongly that the tragic part had been played in a comedy vein, that he and Goodwin quarreled over it, and were not on speaking terms for some time. Finally, meeting at a New York club one afternoon, Lackaye went up to Goodwin and said: "Now, Nat, don't be a boy; let's be friends again." Goodwin was willing, and they had a small bottle. A few moments later, in a burst of confidence, the husband of Maxine Elliott whispered to Lackaye: "Say, Wilton, I'm going to quietly let you something. Next season I'm going to play Bottom in 'A Midsummer Night's Dream.'" "Thank God," cried Lackaye, "there's one character in Shakespeare in which you won't make the people laugh."

Deacon Good—"Don't you think it cruel for you to draw a fish out of his native element by a sharp iron hook?" Fisher-boy—"It's no fault of mine. When I'm just giving a worm a salt-water bath, what does a fish want to hook himself onto my line for? It's no business of his."—Boston Transcript.

The Newest Embroidery Designs

The style of work, familiarly known to our mothers and grandmothers as English embroidery or stiletto work, is now revived and there is nothing more exclusive or up-to-date at the present time.

The designs are simply rich, attractive and fascinating. Another newly revived embroidery, now very popular, derives its name Mountmellick from a town in Ireland, where the work originated in a convent and has reached high perfection. It is durable, rich and effective.

Hardanger is another effective and fascinating form of embroidery. It originated in the Norse town of Hardanger and is especially rich and quaint.

A splendid assortment of all three of the above mentioned embroideries now on display in the middle aisle upstairs.

Catarrh

Is a discharge from the mucous membrane of the nose, throat, stomach, bowels, etc., when kept in a state of inflammation by an impure condition of the blood and a want of tone in the system.

Soothe the inflamed membrane, strengthen the weakened system, and the discharge will stop—to do this purify the blood.

"I was troubled with catarrh for years and tried various remedies but found nothing that would cure me. I then resolved to try Hood's Sarsaparilla and took four bottles which entirely cured me. I have never been troubled with catarrh since. As a blood purifier I can find nothing else equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla." WILLIAM SHERMAN, 1930 6th St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Cures catarrh radically and permanently—removes its cause and overcomes all its effects.
Accept no substitute.
